
What are PRA techniques?

The PRA stands for participatory rural appraisal, here are the children's engagement with PRA and their feedback and reflections from the same.

Children, PRA and reflections

"...we realised people were active in taking about their community"-Shivam

"people know about their community more than us because they won it... therefore they should be consulted rather than we deciding what they eat."-Sabih

"..we came to realise that aunty's maps are different form uncle's maps and children's map of the community again is very different." -Shalini

Transect Walk

Though we ave walked through the Humanyunpur community several time, a tRansect walk was more organised as we observed many things on the way, such as shops, temples, schools, community centres, garbage area and parks.

Similarly, when we visited the community in the Mohammadpur, we realised the best way of doing things are the basically people taking about the community rater than we trying to impose our understanding of the neighbourhood.

PARTICIPATION- PARTICIPATION

The classes 5-8 engaged with participatory techniques to understand their community and neighbourhood better.
